WHAT EXECUTIVES BRING TO COACHING

You are good at your job. The pressure moments are harder.

Most of the people I work with are already successful. What brings them to coaching is a handful of situations where they don't perform the way they know they can.

Nerves before a big moment

A board presentation, a keynote or an investor meeting, and the nerves start days before.

Anxiety at work

Overthinking, replaying meetings at night, a tight chest before a call you can't avoid.

Presence in senior rooms

You know your subject, but you don't come across with the authority your role needs.

Rapport across cultures

Building trust quickly with clients, boards and teams from different countries.

LEADING IN YOUR SECOND LANGUAGE

Sharp in your first language. Slower in English.

Many of my clients lead in English as a second or third language. They are just as capable in English, but under pressure the words come out slower or simpler than they meant, and people underestimate them.

What it feels like

You know exactly what you want to say, then the sentence comes out flatter than the idea.

In fast meetings, by the time your point is ready the conversation has moved on, so you stay quiet.

Small talk, humour and pushing back feel harder than the work itself.

You worry your accent or your grammar is being judged, so you say less.

Presenting in English takes twice the preparation and still feels less like you.

What changes

The same authority you have in your first language, in English.

Phrases and structures for disagreeing, negotiating and small talk that sound natural.

Joining fast discussions comfortably, with ways to come in and hold the floor.

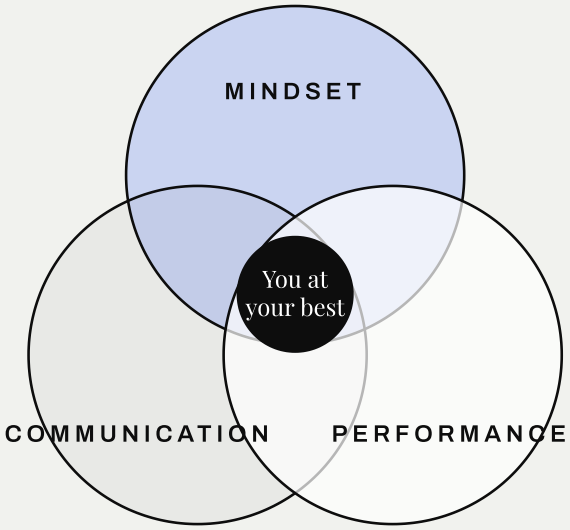

A calmer body, so the words come more easily when it matters.

Your accent kept, with clarity and pace that make you easy to follow.

HOW I WORK

Communication, mindset and performance, worked on together.

I work on all three together, because they affect each other. When your body is calm, your words come more easily. When you have the right words, you feel more confident. When you have rehearsed the real moment, you perform on the day.

This is the Performance State Method, which I built from twenty years as an actor and more than 1,000 people coached.

MINDSET

A calmer nervous system

Regulation, breathwork, visualisation and clinical hypnotherapy for nerves and anxiety at work.

COMMUNICATION

What you say and how

Structure, rapport, presence, language and persuasion for the rooms you lead in.

PERFORMANCE

Rehearsing the real moment

Practising your actual presentation, pitch or conversation, on camera, until it feels natural.

YOUR PROGRAMME

Your programme is designed for you.

We start with a private call about what is coming up and what you would like to change. Then I build your programme from the areas below.

EEG brain training
See your stress response on screen and learn to bring it down.

Public speaking
Keynotes, panels, town halls and conferences.

Confidence
Speaking up, holding a view and being seen.

Anxiety at work
Nerves, overthinking and the dread before a moment.

Rapport and influence
Trust with clients, boards and teams across cultures.

Presence
Voice, body language and authority in senior rooms.

Negotiation
Staying steady and clear when the stakes are high.

Second language
Leading, presenting and pushing back in English.

Media and camera
Interviews, video calls and recorded content.

Difficult conversations
Feedback, conflict and saying no well.

Visualisation
Mental rehearsal, the way athletes prepare.

Breathwork
Patterns for calm, for energy and a steady voice.

OPTIONAL · EEG BRAIN TRAINING

See what your brain does under pressure, and change it.

You wear a light EEG headband while you speak and watch your own brainwaves on screen. We take a reading at rest, another while you rehearse the moment that worries you, and then work on breathing, regulation and visualisation until the reading settles.

Find your triggers

What sets off your stress response, and how to settle it.

Recover faster

How quickly you come back after a knock, and how to shorten it.

Keep training at home

You can keep your own headband and train with the Mara app between sessions.

Proof on screen

A before and after that shows you what changed.

The headband is a non invasive consumer EEG device used for training and feedback. It is never used for diagnosis. This is coaching and performance training, not medical treatment.

INCLUDED IN YOUR PROGRAMME

Mara, so you practise between sessions.

Mara is my interactive performance coaching app, on your phone and laptop. You rehearse your real upcoming moments on camera, get feedback on pace, pauses, clarity and presence straight away, and run it again.

The scenarios from our sessions are loaded in, so the practice picks up where we left off. The night before a board meeting, you can rehearse it with Mara.

- Recordings stay on your own device
- Processed in the EU under GDPR
- Rooms for practice, coaching and speaking in English as a second language
